

A Moon Full of Ants

Author: Aparna Kapur

Illustrator: Priya Kuriyan

Level 2

I opened my eyes and stretched
Poked a cloud by mistake
Wiped my finger on a field
And I made a great lake.

The lake thought it was mine and
Followed me all around
With seven shoes on its feet.
What a terrible sound!

The best person in the world
Called to ask me what's for lunch.
Thirty-seven ice-cream scoops
Bowl of autumn—extra crunch.

I turned into a crow
And won The Loudest Race.
My father was so proud
He grew a second face.

The rabbit who lives on the moon
Said I'm her best friend.
She invited me to dance...

the ring-ding disco bend

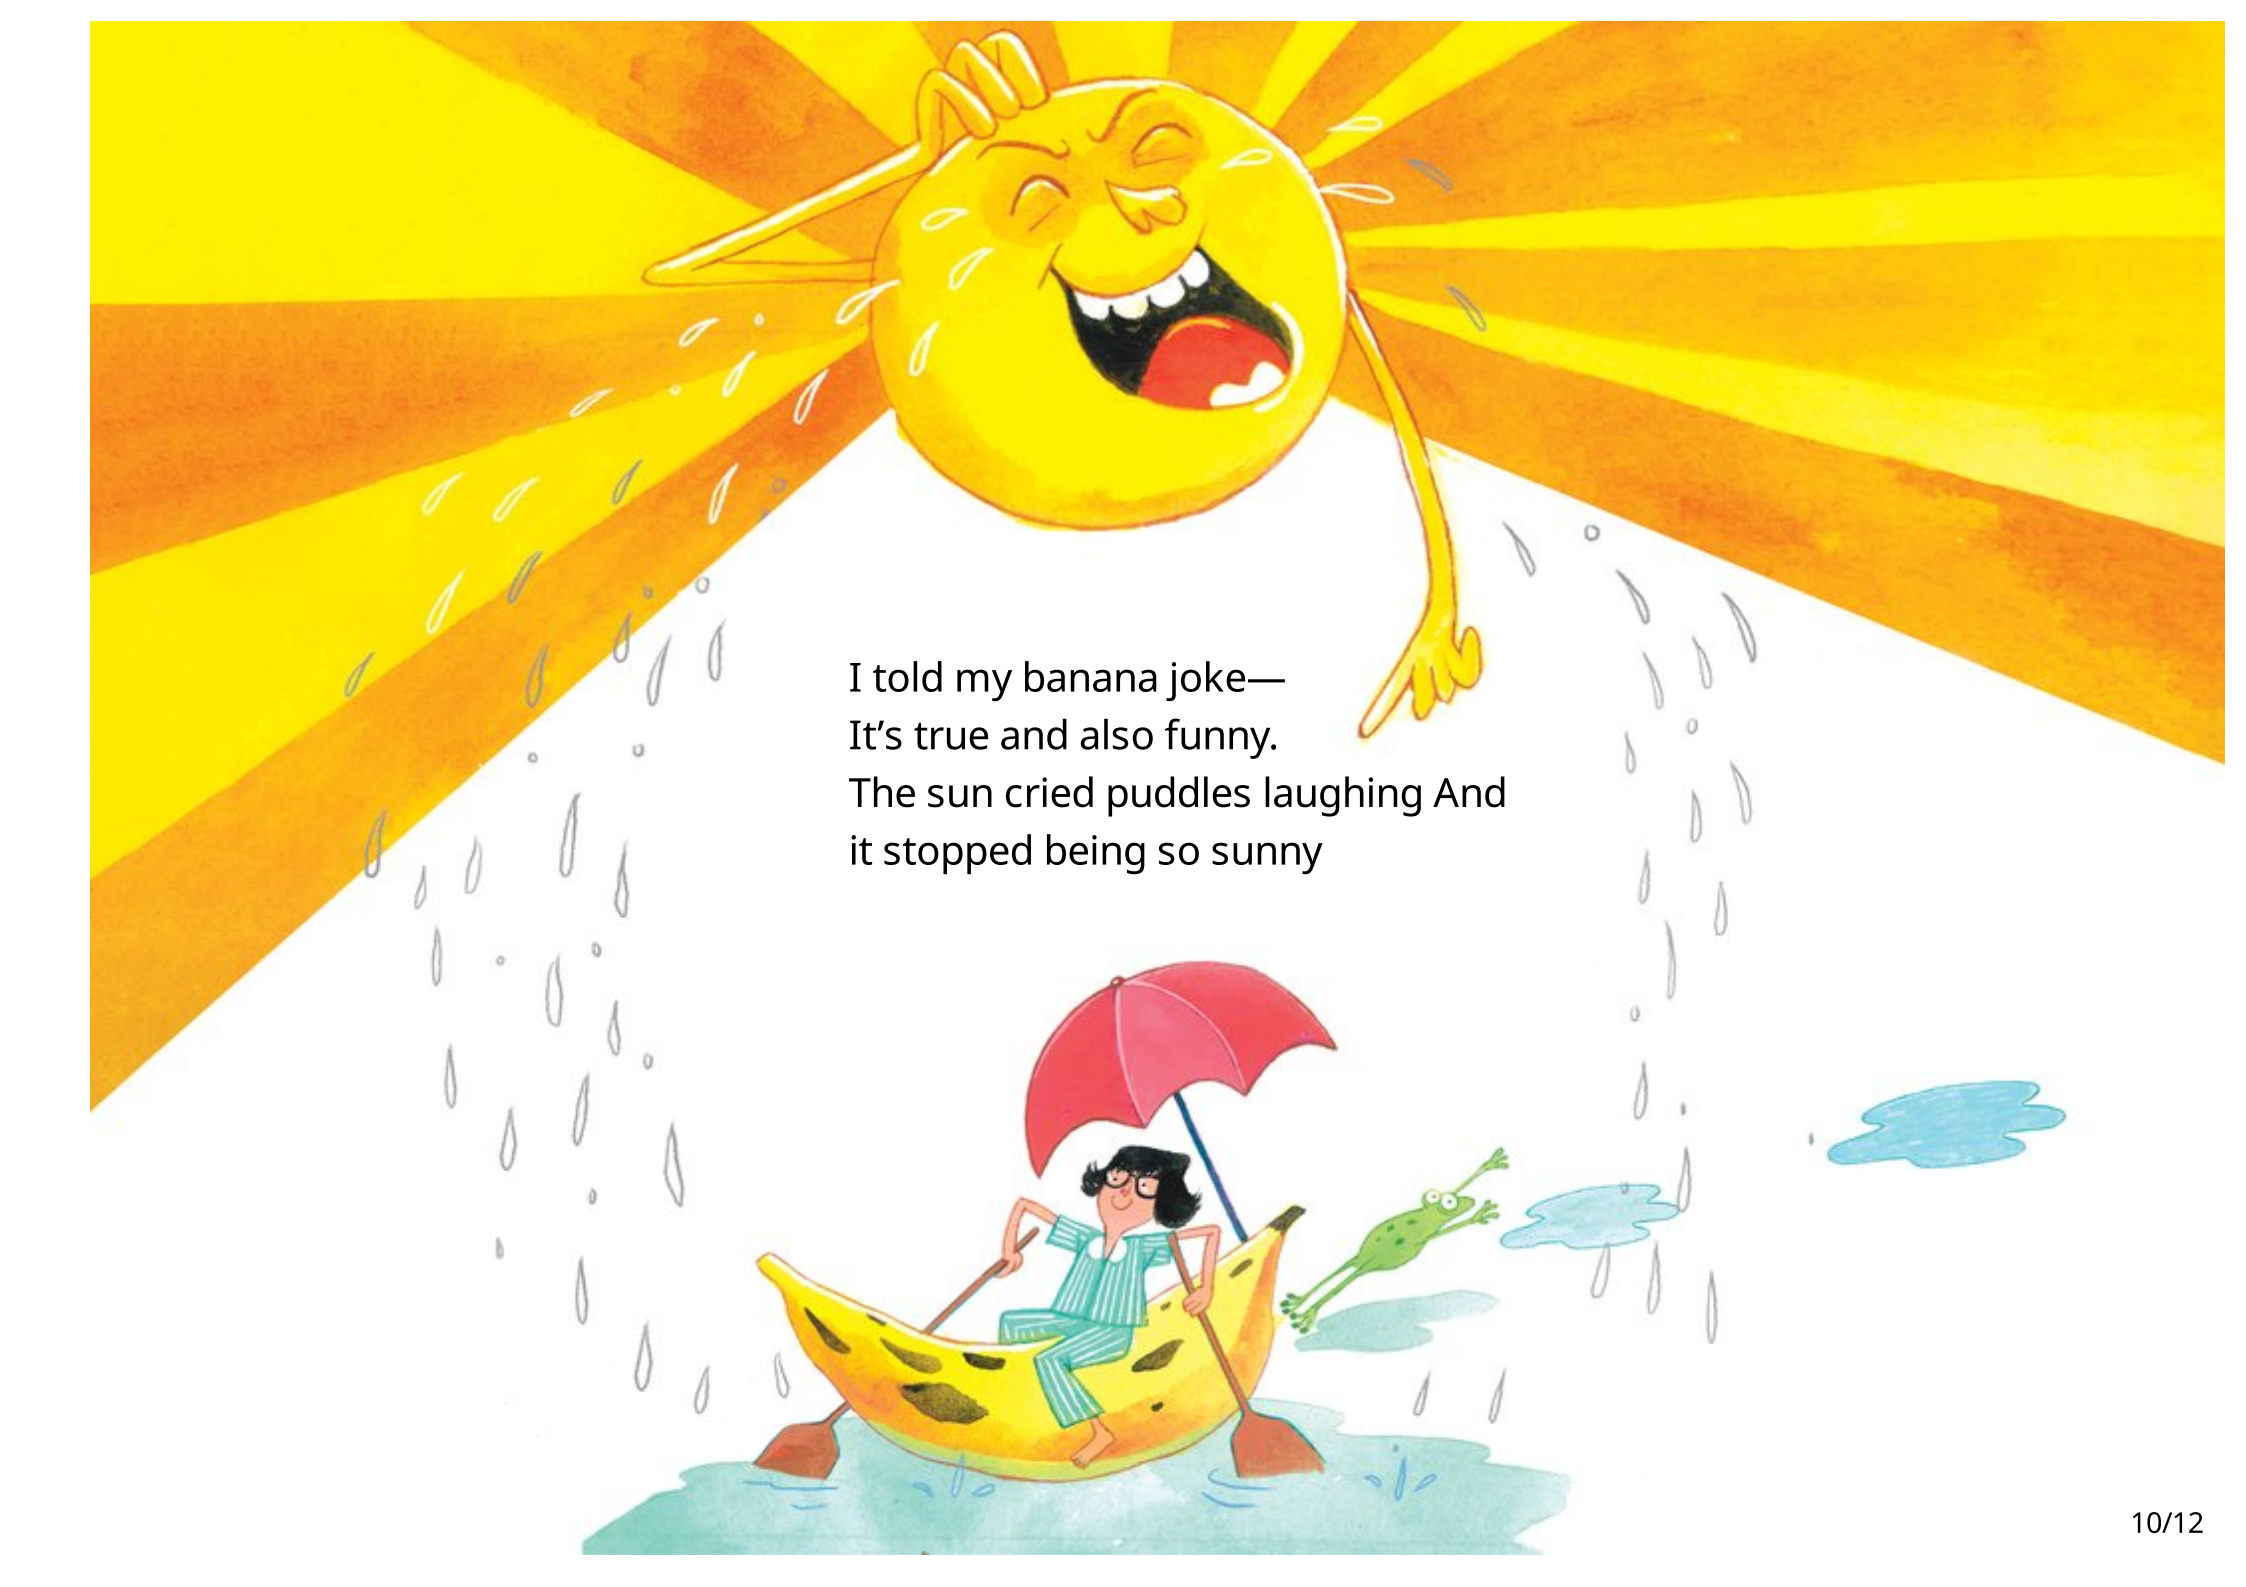

The moon is full of ants
So I won't want to go.
The unicorn who lives
In my teeth told me so.

These are the sorts of things that Unicorns know.
They used to be accountants
Many moons ago.

I went instead to the park
In the middle of the sea.
The corals were delighted;
They'd been so scared without me.

I told my banana joke—
It's true and also funny.
The sun cried puddles laughing And it stopped being so sunny

The puddles led to a planet
With toads and teapots in a maze.
The sun forgot to set, so now

We've been there for plenty-one days.
